

MAYOR SENDS PLEA FOR AID TO CIO HEAD

Gotham Executive Asks Assistance of President Murray To Avert Threatened Transportation Tieup

WAGE INCREASE ASKED

New York, Feb. 25—(AP)—A plea by Mayor William O'Dwyer for help in averting a New York transit strike, which would disrupt transportation facilities used by millions daily, rested today in the hands of CIO President Philip Murray.

The mayor in a telegram last night asked Murray to use his "position and influence" to avert a walkout by the CIO Transport Workers Union and said a transportation tieup would result in "grave injury to the people of the city of New York and cause of organized labor." TWU leaders threatened to stage the walkout anytime after midnight tomorrow unless sole collective bargaining rights and wage increases were granted.

O'Dwyer added, however, that "we cannot and will not recognize any organization as sole and exclusive bargaining agent for all civil service employees." He said he had been advised by the city's corporation counsel that such recognition would be a violation of state laws.

The demanded wage increase was viewed by O'Dwyer as a "just cause."

Earlier, Murray said he had "no comment whatsoever to make" concerning the situation, but in a conversation with O'Dwyer early last week he professed willingness

Murray, who is in Washington, had been expected to come here today, presumably to discuss the matter, but Lee Pressman, general counsel for the CIO, said neither the union chief nor any of his deputies planned to do so.

The Transport Workers Union claims to represent a majority of the transit employes but since other unions also represent many of them it was a matter of conjecture how many men would participate in a strike or what the exact effect of such an action would be.

Quill declared a TWU walkout would paralyze transit operations. To meet the threat, the city was (Turn to Page Nine)

The pleasant side of lending money

To US, the business of lending money is a friendly, human business. And that's how we want to keep it. We like to supply money to help others carry out their plans, to help them get medical attention or to improve their homes. And we're glad so many people like the way we do business.

No. Warren Residents Discuss Big Real Estate Transaction

One of the biggest realty deals that has been discussed in this vicinity in some time is being given attention there by a group of men who all are anxious to see that suburb grow and many new homes be erected. For some years past the Warren State Hospital has had considerable acreage of the Wetmore estate there under lease and as the land lies just north of the Wetmore home and across the New York Central tracks it is feared the hospital in its expansion program might acquire the land. Should this occur it would effectually shut off and further expansion or building in North Warren.

To that end a group of men of the suburb are discussing a project for the purchase of the land and dividing it into building lots. The land lies high and dry and is level and admirable for homesites. During the years just prior to the war many handsome homes were erected on a portion of the land and most of it has been laid out into streets and planted with trees and made most attractive.

Numbers of the men having the project under discussion are returned veterans and they are anxious to purchase lots upon which to erect homes as soon as materials are available. It is to be hoped that the discussions lead to action as the demand for building lots at North Warren is heavy and most of the lots would be snapped up quickly once they are placed on the market.

Signal Corps Has Over-Sea Jobs Available

Electrician; Telephone Technicians, repairmen, etc.; Powerman (Diesel particularly); Radio Repairman, Operator, (High Speed Automatic) etc.

The rate of pay for these positions are approximately 25 percent higher than those paid within the continental limits of the United States. Travel expenses are paid by the government. Meals are available at Army messes at very moderate prices and living facilities are the equivalent of those furnished for military personnel. This is a unusual opportunity for these applicants to save a large part of their earnings.

Anyone interested, Phone L. E. Johnson 3126 for further particulars or write direct to Office of the Chief Signal Officer SPSOP, Room 3D270, The Pentagon, Washington 25, D. C.

Sunday morning the firemen were called to the home of N. D. Casses, 310 East Fifth avenue, where children at play had placed some newspapers in front of a fire. The papers ignited, and a clothes hamper, linoleum and a partition in the kitchen were burned. The fire had been extinguished before the firemen arrived. Saturday morning a false alarm called the department to the Warren Transfer Company on Madison avenue on the way a wire in the aerial truck caught fire and it had to be extinguished. There was little loss reported in either of the alarms.

County Will Receive Large Sum For Roads

An announcement made by Highway Secretary John U. Shroyer plans for a $9,114,551 "farm to market" road construction program were made public in what the Secretary said was the largest road project in the Commonwealth's history.

Warren county will receive the sum of $95,500 which will cover the cost of building 17.1 miles of farm to market roads. Plans for these roads have been prepared and Highway Superintendent Warren Love states that his crews are ready to go ahead as soon as the green light is given them. It will be one of the busiest summers the local highway men have had in many years and will call for the employment of many additional men in the sections where the roads traverse. A large amount of grading will have to be done and the huge grader recently received will prove its worth.

The program calls for construction of 1,004.46 miles of rural highways in every county except Philadelphia.

"The continued prosperity of Pennsylvania depends upon getting our agricultural products from the farms to the urban markets," he declared. "In this mechanical age much of this transportation is by roads connecting the rural areas with the railheads and airports."

Termining the project the "first major attempt to help the farmers since the days of the Pinchot administration," Shroyer added that it was the commonwealth's goal "to see that every farm, no matter how remote, is within reach of a good road."

Margaret Truman Prefers Campus Life To Capital's Sophisticated Society

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent
Washington, Feb. 25—(NEA)—Margaret, President Truman's 21-year-old daughter, is turning out to be a great disappointment to one of the largest and most important segments of Washington's fast-moving social set—the gossiping segment.

Used to the colorful social lives of the Roosevelt children, the dowagers and gossips expected Margaret to live up to that White House reputation. Assuming that she would, the tongues started wagging. Soon after her father took office she accepted several in photographs. Nor do her perfect teeth. She hasn't yet learned the art of tilting her face just right when photographed to soften the effect of her long nose. Margaret is not curvaceous but has extremely shapely legs. Her posture is good and she carries herself with dignity. Photographs somehow show dark circles under her eyes, which she doesn't really have. Spencer Tracy is her favorite actor. He recently appeared here in Sherwood Anderson's latest play, "The Ragged Path." Margaret got her mother's permission and invited the whole cast to the White House for dinner. Margaret had herself placed next to the actor and hung on to his every word.

Just before Christmas she went on a shopping tour with one of her friends. As they were being invitations to parties thrown by Evelyn Walsh McLean—affairs widely known for their sophisticated companion and had a action at these functions began to be circulated. Some claimed that she showed up with intoxicated companions and had a pretty good time herself. These rumors got into print.

Then after several months it became apparent that the talk about her being carried away with her new station in life was not true. The gossip pendulum swung the other way. They said Margaret was too Missouri-ish, too plain, too wholesome, with an innocent lack of interest in the upper strata of society. Women writers soon fell into the habit of referring to her as a "typical American girl." Margaret is unfortunate by not photogenic and those persons who only see her in print have the impression that she is homely.

Now, however, it is becoming pretty well accepted that Margaret fits none of these standard patterns, least of all the "typical American girl" allegation. She does not have a pretty face but it is an intelligent one. An excellent complexion, one of her best features, does not show up one of the others might now be driven to class every morning at nine by the White House chauffeur.

She is a conservative dresser and seldom wears jewels

Margaret is a history major and the standard gag among the students when she hands in a paper is:

"I wonder, which Undersecretary of State wrote that one for her?"

They're kidding. They know she is a conscientious, better-than-average student.

When she failed to return from Independence after Christmas vacation on time her name went up on the blackboard just like that of every other student who failed to turn in a term paper on time.

She became the First College Girl of the Land she's found less time for the normal extracurricular activities of other coeds. The White House car is usually waiting after her last class and whisks her away. Sometimes she goes to the sorority house and chats with the girls. As a result of Margaret's rushing, the Pi Phi's got the largest pledge class on campus last semester.

Recently she was supposed to take part in a history seminar in the evening. When she peeked in the door she saw reporters and photographers present. She signaled one of her friends and the whole thing was transferred to a girl's apartment where it could be held privately.

Margaret is extremely press-shy. She gives no private interviews and she refuses the daily requests to pose for special pictures and for artists. Her only contact with the press is at the periodic White House teas where she talks to society reporters informally. They like her.

Reporters who seek interviews with her are told to mail their questions. Margaret answers only those queries she wants to, and very briefly. She denies rumors that her father helps her with her homework in a current events course, however. The White House staff of social secretaries handles all of her non-personal affairs. Teas and luncheons with her mother occupy much of her time now which was formally devoted to drinking cokes with her girl friends.

Margaret's love interest is the source of the most speculation. But her closest friends say she hasn't met "the" man yet. She doesn't date very often and no one man in particular. She used to go to West Point to visit a cousin once in a while. She enjoyed that. Recently she has had several dates with Maury Maverick, Jr., who has just been discharged from the Marines, son of the director of Smaller War Plants Corporation. Men as yet appear to interest her very little, according to friends.

When she is on a date, however, her conversation sparkles, she is vivacious and appears to dance much.

Her daily routine consists of getting up at seven, eating breakfast at eight and being at class by nine. She loves to sleep late on Saturday when she doesn't have to go to class.

Margaret didn't want to go to College this year. She wants to study and become a light opera or radio singer. She has a good "parlor" voice. She has done well in several amateur musicals. Her father insisted that she finish this, her last year of college.

A friend of Margaret's, Polly Peterson, one of the editors of the campus paper, "The University Hatchet," recently wrote a story about Margaret describing her rooms in the White House:

"In spite of a 15-foot ceiling, her rooms at the White House appear small and cozy. Her living room with a blue background has a collegiate atmosphere with its two divans in front of the fireplace, easy chairs matching blue floral draperies, bookcases, and music around the room.

"Her adjoining pink and blue bedroom with Louis XIV furniture reflects many traits of Mar-

A Message from President Truman

It is of the utmost importance that the American people understand the status and significance of our new Regular Army. It will be the duty of this volunteer Army to help protect the freedoms and maintain the peace we have won at so great a cost.

Atomic power has increased rather than decreased the necessity for our preparation, both in manpower and material. In the coming atomic age, the United States must maintain its military strength—to insure our national security and to promote world order.

Such grave responsibilities obviously cannot be met by anything less than the highest caliber of men. For this reason, I asked Congress for legislation to increase the opportunities of the soldier in the Regular Army. This legislation has been passed and signed by me, and is now in effect.

In serving his country, a man can now get good pay, education, travel and security—with family allowances for his dependents and a new 20-year retirement plan that compares with or excels anything in American industry. These, and the many other advantages of the new Regular Army, should be made known to all our service men and their families.

The Army has embarked upon a worldwide campaign to enlist enough men so that, in demobilizing, we shall not strip our services below the peacetime need. It is imperative that public support be given to this program. We must replace as soon as possible men who have served long and arduously, and who wish to return to civil life. We must also build an Army of volunteers adequate to all our requirements—at home and abroad—until the long-range peace terms and military policies are worked out.

I hope that every individual and group will give earnest and enthusiastic co-operation to this great effort to rebuild our Regular Army. The success of this campaign is vital to the performance of our tremendous task of securing the peace.

Harry S. Truman
PRESIDENT

Congress authorizes most attractive Enlistment Opportunities in our History

1. Enlistments for 1½, 2 or 3 years. (One-year enlistments permitted for men who have been in the Army six months.)
2. Enlistment age from 17 to 34 years inclusive, except for men now in Army, who may reenlist at any age, and former service men depending on length of service.
3. The best pay scale, medical care, food, quarters and clothing in Army history.

THEIR RIGHT

Joseph E. (Mission to Moscow) Davies says that "Russia in self-defense has every moral right to seek atomic-bomb secrets through military espionage if excluded from such information by her former fighting allies." In not turning over such secrets, Mr. Davies seems to feel that we are "ganging up on" the Soviet Union.

If we have told Moscow absolutely nothing about atomic fission, we have been as generous with her as she was about giving us access to military information while the war actually was on. For anybody on Moscow's behalf to find fault because we do not trust her with war secrets is for the pot to call the kettle black.

IN REVERSE

Arthur G. Klein, new Tammany congressman-elect, explained his political ideology on the occasion of his victory in a by-election the other day: "My credo will be that what is best for my constituents is best for the entire nation."

That is the credo of most congressmen. That is the basis of much of Washington's orgy of log-rolling, mutual back-scratching, pork barrels, horse-trading. It is why Capitol Hill has so many politicians and so few statesmen.

Also it is the antithesis of the geometric axiom that the whole is greater than any of its parts, and it is a perversion of the credo of those simple fathers of our country who used to think that "What is good for the entire nation is best for my constituents."

CABBIES MARCH

The Chicago veterans who went to Washington in protest against a Windy City ordinance limiting the number of cab licenses will find general sympathy wherever they go. As things stand, most Chicago licenses are in the hands of two big companies, and the veterans—and others—are deprived of the right to drive for themselves.

However, the veterans should have stayed at home. There isn't a thing in the world that the President, Congress, Secretary Schwelmbach, or anybody else in Washington can do for them. It is a Chicago ordinance that is bothering them. Only the Chicago city fathers can change that ordinance.

CLOTHING SHORTAGE

One New York manufacturer of men's suits blames government regulations for the delay in delivery of merchandise. He says the OPA has not interfered with manufacture, and he is strongly in favor of continued price ceilings. Free prices would not speed production, he contends, but might permit the cost of a suit to double within a couple of months.

It is not the price ceilings themselves that cause the trouble, says this manufacturer, but extreme delay in issuing pricing orders and also delay in amending the order by which OPA seeks to force more yard-goods into the less expensive suits.

A most commendable project deserving of public support is that of the PAK which is presenting a concert Wednesday evening in the First Presbyterian to raise money toward a fund of $300 to be used for the establishment of a book and magazine library for the children's ward of the Warren General Hospital. A program of classical and popular numbers has been arranged that will well reward music lovers for supporting the young people in ambitious endeavor.

Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, one-time bemedalled conqueror of Singapore, was hanged on a flood-lighted gallows before dawn Saturday at Manila as a Japanese war criminal, wearing patched and slouchy American khaki fatigues. Why disgrace the fatigues?

Down in Argentina opposing political leaders express satisfaction with Sunday's election, but it appears it may be thirty or forty days before Argentina learns the result. Plenty of time to cool off before hearing the sad news.

It would be pretty hard to convince some folks that the Pearl Harbor inquiry concluded last week was worth the time and effort.

Looks like those new models will be antiquated before General Motors start producing again.

With almost three weeks to go the groundhog tradition is holding good.

MACKENZIE'S Column

AP World Traveler

Herford, Germany. When you get a close view of the rehabilitation and the democratization of Germany under Allied supervision you wonder whether or the whole this task doesn't present even greater problems than the smashing of the mighty Hitlerian military machine.

Here in the British zone, we find the problem being attacked along two main lines. One has as its objective the raising of the standard of living to the level laid down by Allied agreement—a long term job. The other is the re-education of the German people, and this is the bigger of the two for it is to instill democracy.

The administration bears the hall-mark of Field Marshal Montgomery, who only recently relinquished supervision here to become chief of the imperial general staff.

It is noticeable that there is no coddling of the Germans. The toughest spot in the vital educational program is the group of people between the ages of 14 and about 35, for they are the Hitlerized element. The older folk are less of a problem, and of course it is upon the children that lasting peace largely must be built.

So the British are setting up democratic institutions. These include universities and schools. The while there will be federation among them, they will retain their sovereignty.

New text books are being provided throughout the zone. The old arithmetic books instead of presenting problems in the form of how many apples are two and three substituted SS soldiers, or maybe tanks, for apples.

The British are doing daily broadcasts with a peace theme to the schools. The radio also is telling the students about their countries. There are over two million children in the schools of the British zone but they are short of teachers.

More than incidentally, the scholars are given midday meals with calories daily beyond the normal ration, of 1550, with added calories for heavy workers.

One of the most interesting projects is the establishment of town councils everywhere. These are rather like the American town meeting. The members are nominated at present because the people are untrained, owing to the dictatorship but the members will be elected by the end of June. Education of the general public is of course being carried on intensively through the radio, the press, the cinema, and the theatres and book publishing. The authorities also are encouraging individual Germans to have personal contact with the outside world from which they had been cut off by the dictatorship since 1933.

The newspapers, by the way, are having difficulty in finding newspapermen because all but Nazis were thrown out under Hitler.

He removes bars from freedom of speech, assembly and worship, with Shintoism banned as state religion. Emperor admits his divinity is myth. Big industrial combines broken up. Marshall helps end 18-year civil war between Chinese Reds and Nationalists. Chungking drafts a new "Unity" constitution. Nation grows under shortages and fantastic inflation.	FRANCE National morale low in nation beset by privation, fuel famine, black marketing, currency inflation and politicians' cutthroat race for power. De Gaulle survives leftist trend but resigns "irrevocably" under attacks of critics. Socialist Felix Gouin replaces him, offers program of heavy taxes and government economies.	INDIA Threatened famine, political and racial strife, plus widespread unemployment plus India's most intense drive for independence all spell trouble. Britain sends mission, including Sir Stafford Cripps, to discuss India's future status.
FAR EAST Vigorous native independence drives flame through prewar colonial areas from India to Dutch East Indies, where British battle rebels. Dutch are forced make concessions, re-offer dominion status.	LATIN AMERICA Unrest follows war's end. Venezuela regime overthrown. Argentine flames with violence. Revolution in Haiti. Nicaraguans forced make concessions, re-offer dominion status.	BRITAIN Continues wartime "austerity" regimen, even reducing food ration amounts. With Churchill out, Attlee in, Britain's first socialist government is committed to nationalize coal mines, other utilities. Faced with rebuilding wrecked industry, homes and foreign trade, seeks $3,750,000,000 loan from U. S. Copes with colonial unrest.	BALKANS As ever, a trouble spot. Civil war flares in Greece after liberation. Britain steps in, USSR objects. U. S. refuses recognize Bulgarian regime until elections are liberalized. Yugoslavs vote republic under Tito, dethrone King Peter II. Russia maneuvers to keep Balkans in its "sphere."

Ushering a long-warring world into a long-hoped-for era of perpetual peace is an arduous, painful task. Map above shows the discordant state of the world six months after the end of World War II and details some of the problems to be solved by the peace-making machinery of the United Nations Organization.

A COMMONPLACE BOOK

One of the offputting things about living is how quickly the present becomes the past. "Every moment some form grows perfect in hand or face," says Pater. Then he adds, "but for that moment only." The experience that seems so urgent today is a vivid memory tomorrow, a faint memory next week, a forlorn wisp of forgetfulness next year. The hounds of oblivion are continually snapping at our heels.

Individuals, sometimes, try to do something about the universal will-to-forget. Our grandfather, for instance, thinking himself destined to an early grave, retired from gainful business in his midforties. He didn't die on schedule and time began to hang heavy on his hands. So he spent several of his last forty years disinterring the annals of his forebears from the crypts of time. He died at eighty-three.

Thus the tale of our maternal ancestors is well known to us back to that gray day in 1660 when the good ship, De Bonte Koe (The Spotted Cow), docked at Nieuw Amsterdam from Holland. But no family historian has performed a similar labor of love on the paternal side; so that, beyond our other grandfather, there is only a hazy, hazy day.

Towns, like families, suffer this sort of indiscriminate neglect. From generation to generation, of course, a good bit of verbal heirloomery is handed down. But facts are usually garbled in the process out of all semblance of their original selves. Warren County, however, has been fortunate in having a few individuals with an avid interest in things historic, who have rescued from the past much picturesque and valuable data. Merle Dear-dorff, for instance, has made whole chapters of our history glow with life. His Almanac (whose revival we hope for) was not only original and full of fascinating lore, but a valuable reference book. Harold Putnam has similarly collected material about the Allegheny River, which is certainly as much "la belle riviere" to Harold as it was to Celoron. The history of Sheffield Township has been preserved by Bruce Smith.

The oil industry, too, has its local Gibbon in the person of Ernest Miller, lifelong Warren resident recently returned from three years as Field Director of the Red Cross. We want to acknowledge presentation by Ernie of his new book, a reprint of the original "History of Pitohole," and to tell you a little about it. Pitohole, most famous of oil boomtowns, was a handful of dreary farms until oil was discovered in 1865. Then it suddenly mushroomed into a city, complete with stores, hotels, saloons, and the other amenities. It collapsed and faded almost as rapidly as it had grown. Charles C. Leonard recounted its history in a small volume called "The History of Pitohole," using the pseudonym, "Croucous." Because Pitohole was already on its last legs by its publication in 1867, the history aroused little contemporary interest and the publishers lost $500 on the venture. Today it is the rarest book in oil history. Ernie Miller has republished it for the first time out of his conviction that "it should have been done long ago."

The history itself, a curious miscellany of fact, humor, and comment, is worth reading. The reproduction of the original format and typography, particularly of the advertisements, is equally fascinating. The humor is of the grotesque meat-cleaver variety that prevailed in the political cartoons of the Civil War period; a lineal descendant, we have often thought, of the crude realistic violence of Hogarth and his school. One cut, for instance, is labeled "Remains of Mastodon Found on Holmden Street, 1866," shows a set of false teeth. Another, depicting the energy of Pitohole business men, shows a hardware merchant delivering an oversize kitchen range on his back, having first thoughtfully kindled a fire. There are a few valuable photographs, including the Bonta House, a really handsome building which opened January 1, 1866, and was given away June 6 of the same year. Ernie provides a preface, a gazetteer of towns and a set of biographical notes of early oil pioneers. The edition is limited to 400 copies.

Some time ago, in a public-spirited gesture, Ernest Miller donated to the Warren Public Library his entire oil collection; the fruit of a decade of careful reading and assembling. There it is suitably housed in a special section set aside for the purpose. In 1941 he published "Oil Mania," and followed it with several pamphlets and articles. All in all, contemporary northwest Pennsylvanians, as well as scholars of the future, have ample reason to be grateful to this talented historian who "struck oil" in an intellectual rather than a physical way.

Ernie has a new book in mind on "John Wilkes Booth—Oil Man." The assassin of Lincoln participated in the oil activity of this section, visiting Oil City only a short time before the Ford's Theatre tragedy. Ernie has visited Bel-Air, Maryland, the farm that was once the home of Junius Brutus Booth and his famous sons; has unearthed much unpublished material on this little-known aspect of Booth's life. The book, he hopes, will appear before the end of 1946 and will be available for general distribution.

Japanese Find That The Long Hard Road Home Is Much Rougher Than The Conquest

Marine officers and 71 enlisted men are handling one of the toughest tasks ever given the Marines—repatriation of millions of Japs. At Hario Reception Center, Sasebo, Japan, these men operate on a 24-hour schedule, processing 50,000 Japs each week. Here an LCT, built to ferry American troops and equipment into battle, docks at Sasebo with Jap troops who will be discharged at Hario Center and returned home. Latin Classes of the Bible Schools Have Interesting Window Display at Turners

Since the New Testament was originally written in Greek and many church anthems, choruses, and solos are written in Latin, the churches of the community helped to usher in Latin Week by offering classical numbers as a part of their musical programs. At the Grace Methodist Mrs. Harry Johnson sang "Ave Maria" of Bach-Gounod; at the First Methodist the organ music included "Kyrie Eleison" by Purvis, "Simple Ave" by Thome, and "Andante Maestoso" by Sullivan; Jackson Barrrell's organ numbers at the First Presbyterian were "Prelude, Adagio Cantabile" from Septet by Beethoven; and the anthem was "Jerusalem" from Gallia by Gounod.

At the Turner Radio Shop this week there will be a window display of posters and projects of the Latin classes of Warren High School and Beatty Junior High School. There will be a metal model of the wolf nourishing Romulus and Remus about which the legend of the founding of Rome centers. It was brought from Italy recently. A replica of a Roman sword forged by a former pupil and his father is another item of interest. A book of moths and butterflies with their accompanying Latin names were drawn by a boy who was killed in the service, adding to the value and sacredness of the collection. It also shows how Latin is correlated with other subjects. Various copies of "Nunc et Tunc" and "Vox Discipulorum" published by Latin staffs of Warren are displayed. Copies of "Aux-

GENERAL'S MANEUVER WINS BRIDGE BATTLE

EDITORS NOTE: Annually for the past 15 years, Mr. McKenney has selected the outstanding players of the year for his All-American team. We think you will agree he has selected a truly All-American card team. This is the first of six articles on his selections.

As captain of my All-American team this year, I name Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, former Chief of Staff of the Fifth Army, and later of the Fifteenth Army Division. It was he who got the autographs of General Eisenhower and General Mark Clark on the playing cards used at our bond rallies, through which the Amer-

Generals Eisenhower, Clark and Gruenther are all enthusiastic bridge players. Gruenther overcame his jinx on the club suit when he made seven odd with today's hand, and it was a very pretty play. The first trick was won with the ace of diamonds in dummy, the other two diamonds were trumped with the ace and king of clubs, and the losing spade discarded on the third round of clubs. There was still a club left in dummy for the heart ruff.

It is estimated that before the war, one-third of the U. S. families had incomes under $1,000 a year.

Posthumous Citation For S/Sgt. Bell

Harry F. Bell, 6 Melrose Place, has received a copy of the citation posthumously awarded his grandson, S/Sgt. Harry L. Bell, Jr., on January 21, 1946, by Major General A. D. Bruce, commanding officer of the 77th Division. The action covered in the citation took place just four days before the young infantryman was killed in action, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bell, Greenbelt, Md. The citation follows:

"Staff Sergeant Harry L. Bell, Jr., Infantry, United States Army. For heroic achievement in connection with military objectives against the enemy at Ipe, Leyte, P. I., 10 December 1944. Sergeant Bell, squad leader, Company L, Infantry, was establishing an observation post. Upon reaching the selected position, he saw two enemy soldiers in a draw seventy-five yards to the front. Together with four members of his squad he crept cautiously forward and, hearing them, he noticed that they were examining a map, and had a dispatch case. Sergeant Bell decided to attempt to capture the two enemy soldiers and ordered the other men to cover him as he moved forward. Despite strong enemy fire he continued his advance until the Japanese soldiers threw up their hands and surrendered to him. The information in the captured documents disclosed the positions of an important enemy supply dump and ammunition dump. This dump was quickly destroyed by artillery fire. Sergeant Bell's courage and devotion to duty served as an inspiration to all his comrades."

Rotarians Hear of Plans For Chandlers Valley Centennial

Members of the Warren Rotary Club heard a most interesting talk by Charles L. Eckman, of Jamestown, president of the Chandlers Valley Centennial Association at their regular meeting. Mr. Eckman gave the Rotarians a most interesting resume of the plans for the organization for the observance of the settling of Chandlers Valley by the Swedish people 100 years ago. The group will erect a monument as a memorial to the sturdy settlers who gave to the valley in 1846 and established in the fertile valley a settlement of Swedish folk from which have gone many prominent men in affairs of the nation.

All the funds for the purchase of a park and the setting of a huge boulder which will bear a plaque all handsomely landscaped. Two hundred loads of fertile soil have been spread over the site to make it more attractive. The date has been set for August 10th, and an immense crowd is expected to be present for the affair which in annals of Swedish history in the United States will be only second to the Tercentenary of the founding of New Sweden at Tinicum Island in the Delaware.

This event was marked in 1938 and over 300 from this area attended.

Several of the New York and Pennsylvania Legislators, the Swedish Ambassador to the United States, a former secretary of state, members of Congress, several Supreme Court Judges and outstanding business and professional men all enrolled as members of the Association.

Chandlers Valley is one of the few regions in the United States that can celebrate such a centennial although there are one or two small settlements in the nation that are a little older than the Chandlers Valley settlement. Justice Robert H. Jackson, of Jamestown, of the U. S. Supreme Court, who is now in Germany prosecuting those responsible for the World War and its attendant atrocities will be the chief speaker.

Who will put up the money for our

$150,000,000 EXPANSION PROGRAM?

The public... Men and women in every walk of life... Housewives and widows... School teachers and professors... Business men and doctors... Merchants and lawyers... Telephone subscribers and those who are waiting for telephone service... Telephone company employees...

The people who will put up the money for the Bell System's two billion dollar expansion program, of which ours is a part.

The same sort of people as the 680,000 who have invested their savings in the stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

They're small investors. The average number of shares held by each of them is 29. More than half of them have held their stock for 10 years or more. Not a one of them holds as much as one-half of one percent of the total stock.

There you have the answer to where the money's coming from.

BUT WHY?

Because people have faith in the future of the telephone business, in its integrity and progressiveness, in its stability, and its ability to continue to safeguard their savings and to earn enough to give them a reasonable return on the money they invest.

Because people know that the telephone business never marks time. From the gigantic Bell Telephone Laboratories and the amazing developments that are pioneered there to the construction gangs in the smallest communities, finer and finer telephone service is ever the goal.

WE'RE ON OUR WAY TO THAT RIGHT NOW. Our $150,000,000 expansion program, calling for more jobs, more facilities, and better service, is going full speed ahead.

Here are the Three Objectives of our $150,000,000* EXPANSION PROGRAM

1. To end all waiting lists for telephone service.
2. To provide the people of this State—city people and farmers—with finer and finer telephone service.
3. To make available the many new developments in communication, pioneered by the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Is It Plagiarism?

Webster defines it as "stealing or purloining and using as one's own the ideas, words, artistic productions, etc., of another, without due credit." So, if we frankly state that the following sketch of Ruth Grinnell Beatty, PAK Concert Choir director, is lifted in toto from PAK Patter, it should be marked up by PAK as good free advertising for its hospital benefit on Wednesday night. Under the caption "Here She Is", PAK Patter says:

Your roving reporters caught her after listening to the Choir rehearsal Sunday afternoon (and, by the way, they do sound swell!) and put on a Hedda Hopper act. In a weak moment she confessed much. Her favorite singers are Lily Pons and Lauritz Melchior. Not only is she an expert choir director, but she is also a pianist and fustist. Anytime anyone wants to make a big hit with her, just dish up any kind of sea food and present her with it. First on her list of sports is basketball (Hmmm. Wonder if she could have been influenced by our favorite six-footers).

Elmira, N. Y., can take the credit for her education through High School and College—and believe it or not, Math ranks tops as her favorite subject. In case she gets tired of her music she can just take over editing the Patter, as she has had experience as assistant editor of her school yearbook, "The Iris." She considers Ethel Barrymore one of the best actresses and has no favorite actor.

In close questioning we find that though she likes Van Johnson, she is partial to her husband!

She has directed her College Glee Club and has worked under well known directors in Albany, Cleveland and Washington, D. C. In Washington she directed the Cherub and Junior Choirs at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian church. All this, no doubt, is why she is so good.

We might add that Mrs. Beatty supervised public school music in Jamestown and Elmira and is well qualified for her present assignment.

BROADWAY

NEW YORK—Time was, five or so years ago, that a hot jazz concert in Town Hall or Carnegie Hall was looked on with sniffing suspicion as a freak stunt, a sniffling event which couldn't be repeated successfully. But the noble halls now ring out with the firm beat of a Krupa drum set, an Ellington orchestration, or a huskily sung Basin Street dittie dozens of times a year.

Five years ago Eddie Condon brought his guitar and a formless gathering of New York musicians, who liked their music played without manuscripts in front of them, to Town Hall. The brain-child of Condon and a fellow named Ernest Anderson, who believed there could be money made by such unlikely ventures, the first one was a somewhat sorry affair. The first Town Hall audience was so slim, in fact, that Eddie addressed it as: "Laddy and Gentleman!" He was too close to telling the truth for very much comfort at the time, and no one laughed very hard. And on several later occasions the musicians on stage outnumbered the paying customers.

NOT a few of the critics thought it then that perhaps Eddie and Ernie should be led away quietly to a nice, comfortable room with thick padding for decor. Severe critics, however, thought the recitals a lively and interesting idea. After five years, mostly a struggle, the Condon-conducted concerts, which are haphazard affairs where a meandering and rehearsed quality about concerts which still puzzles a onlooker. They have become popular that Eddie landed, own radio program. Recently have opened their own night in Greenwich Village, called "Eddie Condon's," where the night the regular orchestral, claus of seven or eight instrumentalists is augmented by such notable visitors from the more for swing music field as both Dore Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, Charlie Barnet and any number of highly-paid radio and musicians who "sit in" for fun.

On Mondays, when the Condon gang takes a one-day rest, they tunket to various cities play one-night concerts, within a moderate train ride of Third St., of course. Eddie's no matter what the critics these communities think write of the boys' efforts, can get away the same nice plenty of time to escape feathers or any other apprecia of the sort.

DRAGONS RECORD SECOND TRIUMPH OVER BRADFORD, 40-34

Freshman Gail Nelson Leads Massmen in 4th Canto Push; Best Performance For WHS

Massa's fighting Dragon footballers demonstrated Friday their ability to hold together and stage a "fight to the finish" before 1200 fans jam-packed the Bradford Junior High gymnasium, when the Blue and White pulled out of the fire to record their second triumph of the season over the charges of old Brad, 40-34.

Again in the third, the locals outpointed the Owls and threatened almost everywhere they had the ball. Nelson hit for several goals along with big Jack Eaton, who spent most of his time in a terrific bankboard battle with "Swede" Johnson and Don Frampton. With Eaton and Babcock on the boards, the Dragons began to close in on the gap.

At the close of the third stanza, the Owls were still leading, 28-25, but their margin was becoming less comfortable as the game progressed. The Dragons having played Healey a man-for-man defense after the first period to halt the scoring ace, Bradford was unable to score as easily as it had in the first half.

In the fourth, the locals continued to outmaneuver the Owls, as well as outplaying them. With less than four minutes remaining to be played, Nelson dead-ended the battle at 32 apiece.

Before Bradford or the 1200 fans had realized what had happened, Joe Massa's students had tallied three successive buckets to practically sew the ball game up. Dick Harris, second high-scorer for Warren, heaved a one-hander from mid-court to give the Dragons their first lead of the night. Then Nelson capitalized on a fast-break to pull through with a layup shot, giving a four-point margin to Warren. Eaton clinched the game with a one hand hook shot and Warren was in the lead, 38-32, with less than a minute and one-half remaining.

Healy lifted another two-point shot to cut the Dragon lead to four, but Nelson came through again with another one-hander to close out the evening's scoring and grab the victory.

The Dragons were hurt seriously in the last half by personal foul rulings. Ray Reed, the calm guard, went out via the route less than one minute after the third quarter started, and Eaton bowed out late in the final stanza.

Tomorrow, the Dragons return to their league competition and title search when they invade Franklin for an 8:30 clash with the Nursery, which was knocked out of a possible Section Two tie Friday night by Titusville, 40-37.

A win tonight for Warren would clinch the title for the third straight year, and a loss would tie them with Oil City, providing the Oilers halt Titusville at Oil City.

If the Dragons are successful tomorrow evening, local officials will book a game for this Friday night at Beatty school. A Section championship would keep the Warrenites idle until March 8 when they meet the Erie Tech-Miller Creek-Corry series winner at Edinboro State Teacher's College. If available, either Erie Academy or Erie East will be sought for Friday's game, if there is to be one.

District Nine "B" Playoff at Kane

St. Marys' 36-28 victory over Sheffield Friday night entitles the Dutchmen to meet Ludlow on Monday, March 11, for the northern section title of District Nine Class B competition.

Although playing in Class A ball, St. Marys has an enrollment enabling it to compete in the playoff. Ludlow, though not definitely the winner, needs only one more win to qualify.

The winner of the St. Marys-Ludlow clash would meet the southern section Class B winner, probably Reynoldsville.

Rockets Oust Nursery From Section Race

Titusville, Feb. 25—A red-hot Titusville High School basketball team defeated Franklin, 40-37, Friday night on the Rockets' floor to knock the Nursery out of the Section Two title picture.

It was the third loss against four triumphs in league competition for the Treadwellmen and eliminated them mathematically even if they should surprise everyone by upsetting Warren next Tuesday night.

It was the third sectional victory for the Rockets, whose only previous triumph in league games had been scored at the expense of the hapless Meadville Bulldogs.

George Barber dumped in 20 points to pace the inspired Titusville quintet, while Jack Phillips was high for Franklin with seven markers. The Rockets held leads of 9-6, 25-16 and 33-27 at the quarters.

The Nursery dribblers deadlocked the count at 25-all in the fourth quarter, but lost the game at the foul line, where they converted only seven of 24 chances.

MOOSE MIXED LEAGUE

Moose Club members made things hot in their weekend activity at the lanes, the Intercity locals taking a four-point win from Bradford and a number of records being smashed in the Mixed League.

In the league competition, the Cougars and Lions took respective four-point wins over the Tigers and Badgers. When the Cougars had totaled their team points, it was discovered they had broken the high single total previously held by the Panthers. But before congratulations could be issued, the Lions came through with a 988 to break the loop wide open and give them the new record. In team totals, the Cougars turned in a 2770 to top the former record of 2760 held by the Lions, but the Lions pulled another "first" and popped up with a 2774.

High score of the night was a 2774.

Frank, Ross Gerardi Take County Titles

Frank and Ross Gerardi pulled their brotherly love together last night to cop first prizes, respectively, in the regular and handicap matches of the Penn Bowling Center's Warren County Singles championships.

Frank came through with singles of 234-149-175-149 to string his 16-game total to a 191 average and retain the lead he took over last week. The 705 total last night, the lowest in his four-night stand, gave him first prize of a Victory Bond.

Ross turned in a total with handicap of 3351 to take away the second Victory Bond in the handicap division.

H. Clepper and Harry Wooster wound up in a deadlock for second in the without handicap division, both having a 189 average. The remainder of the first ten rolls: J. Giunta, H. Biers, S. Cosmano, J. Massa, N. Wooster, R. Check and S. Giunta.

In the handicap, Jack Allen followed Ross Gerardi in second. The remaining first ten were: E. Wilson, L. Farr, F. Gagliardi, H. Cooper, D. Silze, G. Senger, J. Salamon, and W. Anderg. A grand total of $141.50 was awarded to winners, the Penn Alleys, operated by Al Clark, giving two bonds. Prizes will be awarded tonight.

Bradford And Kane Playoff Here March 8

The District Nine Board of Control announced Friday that the Beatty Junior High school court here has been selected as the site of the Kane-Bradford playoff for northern section honors in that district.

Officials also stated that the game would be played March 8 at eight o'clock. There will be no preliminary. The winner of the contest qualifies to meet Brookville, southern winner, for the District 9 championship. If Kane should win the battle, the match with Brookville would be awarded DuBois, and if Bradford wins, the championship tilt would be played at Kane.

A limited number of tickets will be available for both Kane and Bradford High schools, and a few ducats will be available for Warren fans.

Knights Lose To Frewsburg Team

The Knights of Columbus continued their drop in the Intercity League Sunday, dropping a three-point match to the Frewsburg Hotel at Frewsburg. The locals copped the initial game, then skidded to lose the last two games and total pins.

Doc Jim Giunta led the Warrenites with a 201 single and a 576 total. Johnson, with a 224 single and 565 total, was high for Frewsburg.

What It Means

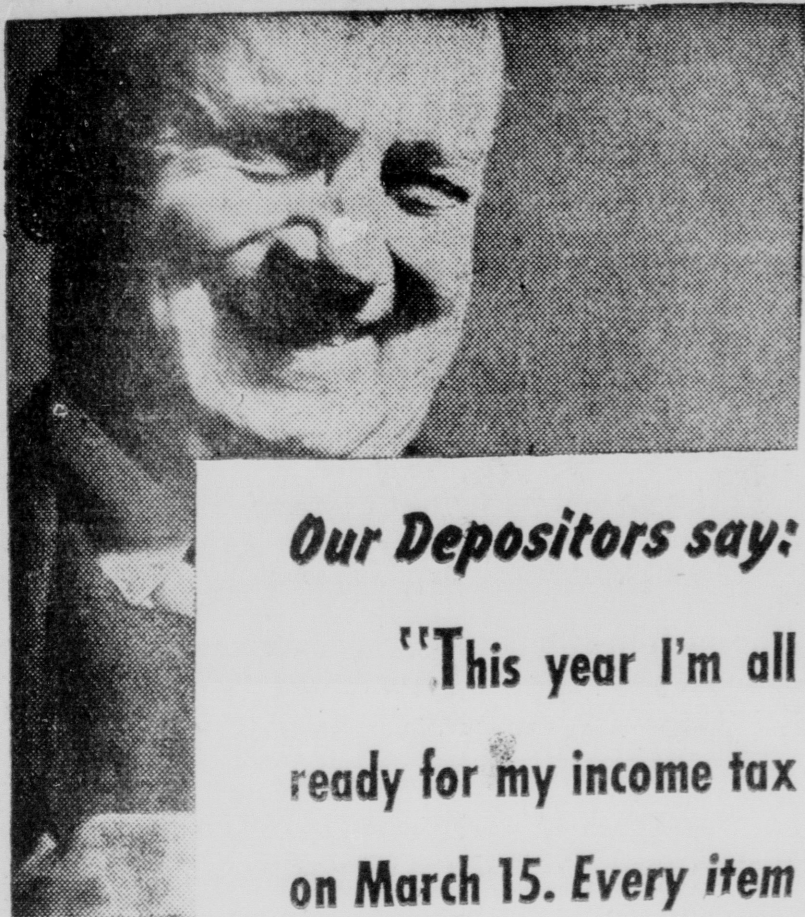

By CLARKE BEACH

WASHINGTON—Ever try to figure out how much Uncle Sam is going to pay the World War II veterans and their dependents before the last surviving widow, a hundred years or so from now, collects her final pension payment?

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans Administrator, has asked Congress for $4,534,633,500 to make all authorized disbursements on behalf of veterans during the 12 months starting next July 1.

About $4 billion of that is for World War II veterans. Since the trend in previous years always has been for the total of payments to veterans to rise annually, at least for 25 to 40 years, it would seem the effect on the national pocket-book might someday be atomic.

However, expert and amateur statisticians in various

CORYDON

Corydon, Feb. 25—The George Washington party held in IOOF hall Friday evening and sponsored by the Youth Fellowship Group of the Corydon Methodist Episcopal church was a success both socially and financially. A clever, novel and most entertaining feature of entertainment was a puppet play presented by 4-H girls, an active organization of South Valley, with Mrs. Bennett Putnam, Mrs. Ted Frank and others reading dialogue cast of characters. A miniature stage setting, upholstered furniture display as well as attractively costumed puppets scored a decided hit. Immediately following the presentation, Miss Bette Frank, in matchless manner demonstrated the basic foundation of costume, costuming and artifices employed in puppet makeup with last but not least the ease by which they can be made to perform in most creditable manner. Congratulations girls we were unaware of our neighboring village talent.

Friday evenings other special feature of amusement provided were pitching pennies, a pie-walk and countless other games in which both oldsters and youngsters joined. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Ruth Crooks and Larry Frank. Present from Kinzua, was the Rev. V. A. Oviatt, pastor of the Corydon M. E. church who was accompanied here by a friend.

"The gains of the Victory Garden program should be made permanent. A broad program of home gardening and food production to promote health, economy, attractive surroundings and recreation should be made a definite part of the plans of the Department of Agriculture, state agricultural colleges, the extension service and all appropriate state agencies, including the public schools, and the numerous private agencies which have so successfully contributed to the garden program in wartime."

Government Support Sought
Government support of a nationwide peace garden movement will be lost because peace has come is a thought which has been expressed in meetings held by Victory gardeners throughout the country. It was put into a definite recommendation by the National Victory Garden advisory committee, meeting in Washington, which addressed the following recommendation to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson:

Railroad Officials Confer With the Borough On Route

Friday a special car carrying officials of the Pennsylvania railroad including the Superintendent and engineering staff came to Warren from Corry and a meeting with borough officials was held relative to the changes to be made in routes here incidental to the construction of a new bridge across the Allegheny river.

The railroad spokesmen were clear in their statement that an application had been filed for a new bridge but they had no definite plans as to the route to be taken. It has been suggested that a crossing of the river be made west of the city and thence up the South Side and an underground arrangement made to do away with the present grade crossing near the railroad station. No complete plans for either route have been prepared.

It was stated by the railroad men that a casual survey made by the company showed that the cost of building the rail line up the South Side would be prohibitive. Not only is the cost of construction being taken into consideration but operation costs would be increased. Switching costs would be increased by the arrangement proposed to locate the rail stations on the South Side.

The railroad apparently desires to erect the new bridge at the present site swinging the south end upstream for some distance and continuing the use of the present crossing.

Position of Warren borough in the matter was outlined and the borough feels that construction up the south side is the proper plan.

However neither the railroad nor the borough has anything definite to offer at the present time and it will undoubtedly be a long time before any complete plans are on file and any complete surveys made.

Millions of Gardeners Want Victory Garden Gains Made Permanent

Millions of Victory gardeners, who transformed neglected vacant lots and back yards into productive war gardens, are organizing to keep up the good work in peacetime.

For three years they have produced 40 per cent of the nation's fresh vegetables, and last year they canned 3,400,000,000 quarts of canned food. Vital as this contribution was to the maintenance of a high nutrition level in both army and civilians, many judges deem the social value of this great garden movement to be almost as important.

Neglected areas of our great cities have become cultivated plots of beauty, through the efforts of war gardeners. Neighbors have been brought together in a community of effort that has spread sympathy and understanding, and developed practical democracy. There is an old motto: "Gardening is an occupation for which no man is too high or too low." This has been literally true in thousands of cases, where millionaires and their wives have worked side by side with maids and janitors, in growing the carrots, lettuce and greens which have saved America from the malnutrition from which most other warring countries are suffering.

Too Valuable to Be Lost
That all this is too valuable to be lost because peace has come is a thought which has been expressed in meetings held by Victory gardeners throughout the country. It was put into a definite recommendation by the National Victory Garden advisory committee, meeting in Washington, which addressed the following recommendation to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson:

Chapter 16

RUSH sat long after Jago left, letting his mind digest the story that Jago had told. Still, the story did hang together and was the only one yet, that explained all the facts that Rush already held. His reverie was interrupted by the buzzing of the inter-office communicator and Gertrude's voice came into the room.

"Merwin's on the phone and old man Germaine's been phoning every half hour."

"I'll talk to Merwin, and phone Germaine on the other wire and tell him I'll be out after lunch."

"Hello, Merwin," Rush said.

"Hello, Rush. Hey, I'm still working on what you told me to."

"Good. What are you getting?"

"I got a couple of leads, Rush. She's made a place for a part-time job in several places but they fluffed her off."

"What did you get at Markio's?"

"Nothing, Rush. He says if you want anything from him you got to come get it personal."

"Okay, Merwin. I'll drop in on him."

"What do I do, Rush?"

"Keep at it, Merwin, and keep it clean."

ferent story to tell you. I can't tell you yet who killed your son. I can tell you why he was killed; I could name a number of people, one of whom I'm sure held the knife that killed Paul. I won't name them. When the time comes I'll name the right person and the police can take over from there."

"Agreed, agreed," Germaine said. "But tell me at once, why was my son murdered?"

"Your son was killed because of something the murderer hoped to find in his possession."

"What, in God's name? What could he have had that was valuable enough to murder for?"

"A pair of almost priceless emeralds."

Disbelief and disappointment fought in Germaine's face.

"Emeralds. I am afraid that is out of the question, Henry. Where could he have gotten possession of emeralds of any value?"

"Your son's friend whom he visited in San Francisco recently, had somehow managed to bring a pair of valuable emeralds into this country. He knew that he was dying and he was afraid for his safety, so he gave them to your son. The explosion, Mr. Germaine, was no accident. It was purposely set to cover the theft of the emeralds by a group of men who let nothing stand in the way of acquiring something they want. They wanted the emeralds your son had, so he was murdered."

"Then why not arrest them as a group?"

"That is just what I don't want to do, Mr. Germaine. In heaven's name, why? On the face of it, they seem collectively guilty."

"The situation is a good deal more complicated than that. You see there is more than one group involved, or rather a group and an individual. At this moment it would be impossible to settle actual guilt on any one of them. Arrest them all and the chances are you'll lose them all."

Germaine looked at Rush grimly. "I'm paying you to know your business. Henry, I'll continue to believe that my trust in you justified. But heaven help you the guilty one escapes."

"Before I leave," Rush said, "there are several things I'd like to clean up."

"Yes?" said Germaine.

"First, have you any where Paul might have hid the emeralds?"

Germaine wrinkled his brow thought. "I'm continually prised and sorrowed, Henry, how little I know about my I can only think of the obvious places. His room, a deposit some such place."

Rush hesitated. "I see spend my visits here search your house," he said. "But I search Paul's room?"

Germaine rang for Horace the ancient butler showed him to the second-floor door of Germaine's room.

In the short half hour he had visited every possible place short of a secret panel, even that he insured against a circuit of the walls and tapping for a hollow space found absolutely nothing.

He hadn't, in fact, expected anything. He had no idea when the younger Germaine had hidden his treasure, but he had feeling it would be in a less expected place than his own room.

His search completed, Rush with only a word through door to Germaine that his had been fruitless. Rather call a cab he walked the distance to the Drive, thinking as he walked that he had only a few steps on the Drive before a cab could have alongside and I got in, giving the address Barney's."

It was too late even to fashionable when he decided find dinner. He dawdled over meal, reading the paper and finding in a half column on page that the police knew not they hadn't known the after when he emerged from the taurant and gave a cabbie West Side address of Markio's
